You can help school libraries in Vanuatu recover from Cyclone Pam

FAIR is raising funds to replenish books destroyed in school libraries during Cyclone Pam which devastated the islands in mid March.

When we contacted the Chief Librarian of Vanuatu's National Library and Archives, June Bela Naviti, she told us that it would be best if the funds raised could be spent on children's books, school readers, English dictionaries, French dictionaries, encyclopedias and non-fiction books.

In an email to us she said: 'If you all would raise some funds and get some books over to us then that would be very awesome. The National Library of Vanuatu will make sure that these books will reach all school libraries that were wiped out by Pam.'

If you would like to help the school libraries of Vanuatu, you can make a donation here or via the FAIR website: fair.alia.org.au

Thanks!

FAIR is an initiative of the Australian Library and Information Association which enables people to show their support for libraries and the issues that we feel passionate about.
